The Chicago International Trade Commissioners' Association (CITCA) is a volunteer organization comprising the Trade Representatives from foreign governments based in Chicago, with jurisdiction mostly for the Midwest Region of the United States. CITCA currently has about 50 members representing more than 40 countries from across the globe.

Collectively, these members represent a wealth of international business expertise as they seek to promote bilateral trade & investment opportunities between their respective countries and the Midwest. The purpose of this meeting is for select CITCA members to describe their role and to advise on how best the Midwest business community can utilize them as resources.

Following the panel discussion there will be a networking reception with the panelists and many other CITCA members to promote a clearer understanding of what they can do for your international business.
